DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This brick stucco house is 3 stories high covering the mansard roof, a Victorian addition to an earlier center-hall house of two stories, presumably under a pitched roof.

Facing south on a wooded knoll overlooking the Northeast River and the road that formerly carried the main carriages and coaches from Philadelphia to the South, it still has a chippendale staircase and remnants of fine woodwork.

5 bays by 3, L shaped, with the wing running north 2 bays by 2.

Chimneys, now closed off, rise from two fire places in each end wall.

4. NOTABLE FEATURES, HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE AND DESCRIPTION OPEN TO PUBLIC NO Greenhill appears to be a house dating from the 1870's. It is five bays long and two bays deep, constructed of brick which has been stuccoed and covered with a mansard roof. The central entrance has double doors with arched panels and a porch which has a railing around the roof (on the second floor). Above the second floor door, which opens onto the small porch, mentioned above, is a small canope with Victorian pierced fretwork. The cornice of the whole house has a cove wood cornice with pierced fretwork. The dormers have segmental arch roof. The interior is divided into a central hall which is flanked by two rooms on each side. Originally the house consisted of the hall and the two rooms to the west, which have been made into one large room. It was constructed around 1760 and possesses a very fine Chinese trellis stair rising to the attic. There are paneled window jambs and window seats and a heavy dentil modillion cornice. The building is kept in good condition but is very close to the Penn Central Railroad and it looks out to the Northeast River over an unsightly lumber mill. On the grounds are two small brick buildings, one being a kitchen or office and the other a spring house.
